MONDAY, JUNE 27.

Kansas farmers are tearing up their mortgages and investing in United States 3 per cent bonds. Reason, the Kansas wheat crop is simply immense again this year.

New Mexico will contribute nearly 1,000 volunteers to the United States forces during this present war. Taking the population of the territory into consideration, this number of men is a very large ratio indeed.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland and Would-Be President W. Jennings Bryan oppose annexation and what they are pleased to call "an imperial policy." Rather funny to see these two ducks under the same political coverlet.

Admiral Camara's fleet has steamed to the entrance of the Suez canal and there has been refused permission to coal; what the handsome and gallant admiral, the pet of the Madrid ladies, will now do remains to be seen. He may follow the illustrious example of that celebrated king of France, who, with twice 10,000 men, marched up the hill and then marched down again.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Albuquerque Democrat, makes itself believe that the New Mexican is afraid of the political situation in the territory. This idea pleases our esteemed contemporary and cuts no molasses with the New Mexican. There would be cause to fear for the political situation in the territory, were there a Democratic administration in power, but this not being the case, the Republicans, should they carry the November, 1898, elections, and all indications point that they will, will not be swindled out of a majority in the legislative assembly as was the case under the last Democratic administration, when Democratic officials simply stole legislative assemblies and unsentenced and fairly elected Republican members of the assembly because they could, because might was right, and because the Republicans felt that that no justice or right in law in political cases could be had from a majority of the members of the Democratic Supreme court.

A couple of weeks ago the free silver papers, with their usual vehemence and disregard of truth, were howling that Colonel W. Jennings Bryan with the 3rd Nebraska would be ordered to the Philippine Islands in order to shelve him and get him as far as possible away from this country. They just yelled themselves hoarse at the proposed injustice to be shown him. Now, however, it transpires that Colonel Bryan with hundreds of other officers and thousands of soldiers has been ordered to Cuba and the free silver shouters are taking another tack. This time, the administration is accused of sending the gallant colonel to Cuba that yellow fever or some other disease might prove fatal to him. Those papers make the average citizen very tired. But space must be filled and Mr. Bryan must be kept before the people. If not in one way then in another. It is but fair to say, however, that it is believed Colonel Bryan would stop all that sort of rot, could he, but sensations are the very life blood of the class of papers alluded to and must be fabricated, no matter whom they injure.

Judge E. V. Long has tendered his resignation as district attorney for the counties of San Miguel, Mora and Guadalupe. The vacancy thus occasioned has been filled by the appointment of Hon. Louis C. Fort, who has represented San Miguel county in the house of representatives and in the council of the legislative assembly and who has held the same office under previous Republican administrations. Looking at the several resignations of Democratic officials within the past six months, it must be admitted that the saying, "office holders seldom die and never resign," does not hold good in this territory. No less than six Democratic district attorneys have resigned during the past few months. Of course they did well by the territory and very likely also by themselves in so resigning. The New Mexican does not believe in raking up records unless some good can be done. For the present these matters will be allowed to rest. However, they will be born in mind to be referred to whenever the best interests of the people so demand.

Americans are Imperialists.

Ex-President Cleveland and Colonel W. Jennings Bryan, both of a little more than local fame, have taken the position that America must not for one moment think of acquiring foreign possessions, and when Spain has been defeated, the islands that have been occupied must be allowed to become the prey of any power which may desire to take them by force. But these eminent gentlemen represent a very small class of American citizens, and their utterances on the matter will have but little weight.

The real sentiment of the people is expressed in the action of the merchants of Boston and other eastern cities, who have formed an association for the purpose of extending trade in the east, which has heretofore been monopolized by European countries. With the Hawaiian and Philippine islands in possession of the United States the business men interested in the movement are assured of protection in their rights, and from those islands can extend their trade into all parts of the eastern countries. The changes which will follow the result of the war will bring about conditions favorable to American commerce, and the promoters of the undertaking consider that the opportunities for extensive transaction in the far east are beyond those presented in any other quarter.

The taking and occupation of the Philippine Islands will serve two purposes: free the inhabitants from a detested rule, and open opportunities for American enterprise. The greater number of Americans take that view of the question, and all the shouting of those opposed to the retention of invaded territory will avail nothing. If it is "imperialism" to acquire territory, the people of the United States are imperialists. That is the long and short of the matter and all acts of congress in the future will be based upon that sort of imperialism.

A Study of American Life.

The organization of the various volunteer regiments for the war with Spain, and particularly of the regiment known as the "Rough Riders," which is composed of wealthy young men of New York and poor men from the far west, with no less a personage than Theodore Roosevelt second in command, has resulted in a study of American social and political conditions, and the characteristics of American people by the London Spectator, which undoubtedly surprised the Britons in its conclusions. From the time of Charles Dickens to the present, the masses of the English have persisted in regarding the Americans in the light of the information as portrayed in "Martin Chuzzlewit," but the article in the Spectator takes an entirely different view.

The Spectator takes the ground that the greater number of Americans are what is known as "self-made men." Grandfathers do not count for much in establishing the social or political standing of an American. In England distinction is apt to be regarded as political distinction, for the reason that for centuries the great majority of distinguished Englishmen have been connected with political life, even in the cases of many men of letters. But in this country it is different. A man may be prominent in politics and still have no great social position, and may be illiterate to a painful degree. On the other hand, men who are noted for their learning or social standing may be entirely unknown in political circles. Still they command respect in these several circles by reason of powers which have been developed by environment.

The idea that the "almighty dollar" is by far the greatest social force in America, receives a well merited setback from the Spectator. While the fact that Americans are money makers is not denied, it is shown that comparative poverty is no drawback to men of worth. By force of energy the accumulation of wealth has become a power, not unlinked with evil, "but it must be carefully differentiated from that vulgar worship of wealth which is thought to mark the millionaire. The truth is, that the average, quiet, unobtrusive American citizen, who in the last resort really rules, is distrustful of great wealth; and events are likely before long to happen which will make evident that distrust."

The one thing in American life which especially attracts the attention of the Spectator, is the regard held for education and the influence it exerts. In this the clergy and teachers go hand in hand, and while they are comparatively poor, they are held in great esteem by all classes. The utterances of great preachers are placed before the public and eagerly read; the opinions of educators are accepted in matters political as well as in those in which they are directly concerned. By a system of public schools supported through taxation, the poorest child in the land is enabled to secure an education, and in place of becoming a public charge takes his place in the world of business, politics or letters. In conclusion, the Spectator says: "The schoolmaster and the preacher, are, in short, the two factors held in high esteem, and these when America finds her soul, will always be found topmost in her social fabric, the real, unacknowledged aristocracy of American life. So long as this remains true, the vessel of American democracy may be beaten about by the fierce tempests which must come, but she will not go under."

THE WISE BACHELOR. And What He Thinks He Knows About Folks and Affairs.

No man ever gets as full as his wife's good shoes do.

If babies commenced hairing as soon as they commenced teething, old bachelors would understand them better.

Every man, when he quarrels with another man, thinks he reminds other people of a big mastiff and the other man of a cur.

The average man never eats green corn without looking like he wanted to put his foot on it.

It is possible for a woman to learn to be a good cook, but by that time she is generally a widow.

No girl who is over 5 feet tall has any right to try to not kitchenish.

A woman decides on the man before she decides to marry; a man decides to marry before he decides on the girl.

When two girls first meet, they spend the first hour trying to find out what each other knows, and the second trying to find out what each other doesn't know.

The world is divided into two kinds of folks—those who think they are observing other people, and those who think other people are observing them.

Nothing makes a woman mad so quick as to have her husband laugh when she says she has always prided herself on her ability to keep her temper.

When a girl is so embarrassed that she puts her hand over her face, she always looks through her fingers to see if the man is looking to see if she does.

A woman always pretends to smile and be so interested when her husband reads her where it says in the paper that Turkish women aren't allowed to talk above a whisper in the presence of their husband's relatives.—New York Press.

An Oriental Incident. "What, O dog, have you to say for yourself?" asked the just and humane shik.

"I was loaded, O shadow of the prophet!" faltered the culprit.

"And what am I to do with you, O scum of the desert?"

"Discharge me, substance of immanent good!"

Thereupon the shik gave the fellow 100 blows of the bastinado, being rather more humane than just.

For the statute of limitations had run against that joke in Egypt centuries before, and it irritated the shik to be running against it now.—Detroit Journal.

No Fiebelan Ailment. The czar of all the Russias frowned heavily as the messenger informed him that the people, having heard of his illness, clamored for a bulletin.

"It would never do," he murmured, "to say I have a boil on the back of my neck. No. Tell them."

His voice betrayed his anxiety.

"That I am suffering acutely from a tumorous furuncle of the subcutaneous tissue."

Ringling for a fresh bread and milk peddler, he bit into a caviar sandwich.—New York Press.

Provided Against. "Now, confound them," muttered the burglar to himself, as he searched the china closet again, found a concealed drawer and extracted therefrom a solid silver set, which he transferred to his sack, "they will not be able to say in tomorrow afternoon's paper that the thieves in their haste overlooked about $400 worth of costly plate."—Chicago Journal.

Preparing For Action. Featherstone—Will your sister be down soon, Willie?

Willie—I guess so. She is changing her dress.

Featherstone (impatiently)—What is she doing that for?

Willie—She said she wanted to put on something that didn't rumples.—Harlem Life.
